Lion Refining Co. Defies Order to Close Oil Wells

El Dorado Company Asks Injunction Against State Commission

IS A PRICE MOVE?

Company Contends No Justification for the Shutdown Order

EL DORADO, Ark.—(AP)—The Lion Oil Refining company Thursday challenged in the court the right of the Arkansas Oil & Gas Commission to issue an order shutting down all crude oil production in the state's controlled fields.

The Lion company defied the order by continuing to take oil from its wells in the nearby Shuler field.

At noon Thursday the company applied for an injunction in Union chancery court, charging the shutdown order only pretended to prevent waste, and was entered "for the unlawful purpose of attempting to affect the price of oil produced in Arkansas."

Named as defendants were: Chairman O. C. Bailey of the state commission, all the commission members, Attorney General Jack Holt, the prosecuting attorney Oren Harris of the 13th judicial district.

The suit contended also that the shutdown was ordered without notice or public hearing, and that the commission was without authority to take such action, that no emergency existed warranting the order, and that there was no necessity at this time to prohibit oil production in the state.

It was announced that Pete Shields had been employed as manager of the Snow White Food Mart. Mr. Shields has been connected with the grocery and meat market business in Hope the past 16 years.

He invites his friends and the public to call on him at the new store, Pond and Hervey streets. Mr. Shields expressed pride in the installation of the air-conditioned unit for the convenience of patrons which makes shopping more comfortable.

Mayor, 19 Others Guilty of Fraud

Sweeping Conviction in Fraud Trials at Waterbury, Conn.

WATERBURY, Ct.—(AP)—Mayor Frank Hayes, 56, named by a special grand jury as a keyman in a municipal reign of "rampant corruption," was convicted Wednesday of conspiracy to defraud this industrial city of more than a million dollars.

With the former lieutenant governor were convicted 19 others, among them city officials, state political powers, and another day, business men, attorneys, and accountants. The twentieth accused, who chose to have his fate determined by the court rather than the jury, was convicted by Judge Ernest A. Hughes.

The verdicts came 15 months after a special grand jury charged that between 1930 and 1938 tre city treasury had been looted of large sums of money through fraudulent payments to a "favored" group.

The Waterbury railway station in London covers 2 1/2 acres.

Zoning Ordinance Vital to a City

Protects Residential Values, Expert Tells Little Rock

LITTLE ROCK—If the Little Rock City Council would require every applicant for a change in the city zoning ordinance to prove that the change would benefit the entire city and not merely one or a few individuals, the council would find that many of its zoning problems are not as serious as had seemed, Russell H. Riley of the St. Louis firm of Harland Bartholomew and Associates, said Wednesday.

If a zoning ordinance is followed and development is held to areas zoned for purposes fitting the development, the city will develop in a way that will mean most and will give proper use of the property, Mr. Riley said.

Early zoning ordinances were liberal in the belief of endless growth. They did not afford protection for established residential districts near downtown sections but allowed commercial plants to creep in with the result that people moved to newer residential sections. Time has shown, however, Mr. Riley said, that these old established residential districts have not been absorbed by business and commerce and that city districts have become a hodge-podge. Zoning is a guarantee to newer residential districts that such deterioration will not occur, he said.

New Tax on Beer to Be Challenged

Court's Refunding Opinion May Have Bearing Elsewhere

LITTLE ROCK—The Arkansas Supreme Court ruling in the bond refunding case that held Paul Gutensohn of Fort Smith an illegal senator caused speculation in official capital circles Wednesday that the decision might affect validity of the 1938 Nyberg Act, placing a consumers sales tax on beer, liquor and wine, and result in a special legislative session to readjust beer and liquor revenues.

The special session talk gained impetus when J. Hugh Wharton, lawyer for the Arkansas Wholesale Beer Dealers Association, announced his group probably would challenge validity of the Nyberg act in court action to be filed soon.

"In all probability I will go into court and contest the Nyberg act if the opinion is what I understand it to be," he said.

Mr. Wharton said he would study the opinion and consult officials of the beer dealers' association before taking action. The association brought suit several months ago challenging validity of the Nyberg act but the Gutensohn angle was not raised in that action.

Republic to Take Action on Nazis' Behind-Scene Plot

Suspect Germans of Working in German-Polish Minority

ASK "NO MUNICH"

Germany Asserts She Will Deal With Poland Without Any Help

By the Associated Press

Europe watched anxiously Thursday as Poland faced firmly the increasingly insistent Nazi demands for settlement of the Danzig question.

Guarded hints were dropped in Berlin that Germany had left the door open for direct negotiations with Poland—and that Germany was not inviting another "Munich" settlement involving other powers.

Well-informed sources described Danzig as no bargaining point at all. They said the viewpoint was spreading rapidly that Germany should increase her demands.

In Warsaw, a sweeping Polish campaign against any Nazi bargaining within was predicted following the "temporary detention" of Rudolf Wessner, co-leader of the German minority party.

BERLIN, Germany.—(AP)—Adolph Hitler met with the chief of his air force, the head of his Press Department and his foreign minister Wednesday as the army continued "preparations measures" in the light of German pressure on the Danzig question. Ostensibly, the callers came to felicitate Hitler on the twenty-fifth anniversary of his enlistment as an Austrian volunteer in the German World war army.

Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop earlier, however, had conferred at his Alpine home with Count Czakay, foreign minister of Hungary whose cooperation, or at least "benevolent neutrality," Nazis acknowledge would be of vital importance to the German-Italian alliance in event of a European war.

The air chief, Field Marshal Goering, is considered Hitler's right hand man, and Press Chief Otto Dietrich handles official pronouncements.

Reports were received that "large numbers" of fresh German troops had arrived at Gleiwitz, on Poland's southwestern border, within the last five days. Gleiwitz is near Beuthen, where a 70-mile strip of border was closed Wednesday. Nazis attributed the initiative for the closing to the Poles.

Normally the town is the post of one infantry regiment and one artillery regiment. Soldiers there now wore bits of cloth over insignia on uniforms to conceal regimental numbers. Army trucks and soup kitchens continued to rumble by in Berlin and other cities. Young men in offices and factories continued to receive sudden notices to report for duty early next week. Courses in anti-aircraft protection were intensified.

Along with this activity was an appearance of intensified diplomacy, probably with the knowledge of Premier Mussolini of Italy. It was directed toward a peaceful solution of the Danzig and other European questions satisfactory to Hitler.

Government spokesmen asserted that there could be no conference with anyone over Danzig, unless it be one to discuss the method of handing over the Free City unconditionally to Germany. These spokesmen also declared that "an arrangement whereby East Prussia is connected with the Reich" by a strip across the Polish Corridor must be included in any Danzig settlement.

The press supported with unabated vehemence a demand that there be a speedy solution of these problems, and opposed delaying matters by another conference.

15 Dem. Senators to Fight 3d Term

Van Nuys, Indiana, Says Roosevelt as Nominee Would Be Beaten

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—The prediction that at least 15 Democratic senators would refuse to support President Roosevelt if he is nominated for a third term was made Thursday by Senator Van Nuys, Indiana Democrat.

Van Nuys told reporters: "It is not unlikely the president may cudge another nomination from the Democratic convention, but if he does I do not believe he will be re-elected."

Congress Plagued by Sorry Fishing

Caliber of Washington Fishing May Account for Strange Votes

WASHINGTON.—One reason congressmen want to go home is to get at some honest Christian fishing.

We are not the final authority on what fishing ought and ought not to be, but we do know good fishing when we find it. And fishing in the backwash backwaters around Washington doesn't qualify.

It is nice, in several ways, to be a member of congress. From now until next January most members won't have anything they absolutely must do. So they can spend at least a little time in luxurious unessential while driving away the conflicts, panics and biles of a crusty session.

For that we recommend trout fishing with a light rod and flies in a mountain stream. Flat streams won't do. The quiet is too overwhelming. Ocean backwaters won't do. Congressmen fish in backwaters around here.

The Than Which

A boat trip on the Chesapeake is a staple of that. The late Senator Joe Robinson of Arkansas used to indulge, but it never took his pressure down.

You go out in a boat with half a dozen companions. A motor pulls you out into a channel current. You lower lines. They are hand lines. They are not on a light pliable pole.

You place a piece of shrimp or maybe a lump of jelly-like crab meat on the hook, sink it with a five-ounce anchor, and wait for bites three to 10 fathoms down.

You are likely to catch anything from sea trout to crabs and eels. And have you ever stepped on an eel, at night, in the bottom of a boat?

Much of the fishing is after dark or just before sunrise. We hate to think what might happen if a congressman, fishing on the bay in an effort to clear his mind before an important vote, hauled up one of those horrid slack-water messes called a toadfish.

At 3 o'clock in the morning, with four stiff drinks and a sudden sandwich under your belt, there is nothing else quite so tasty looking as a toadfish.

Have Mercy

If your congressman didn't vote right on neutrality or lending-spending, think twice before you hang his political scalp on the traffic light at Main and Seventh street.

The fellows may have tried honestly to do his mind with some fishing only to haul up a toadfish that made him think the world was an ugly place not worth saving.

Majority Leader Barkley gave a hint of the situation when he pleaded for time for congress to get back home and gain strength from the feel of familiar spots. He tried to tell the story of the Greek giant, Antaeus, whose strength was restored each time he touched earth. By the closing hour of the hectic session Barkley couldn't think of the giant's name. He was that high in the air. He thought it might be Antaeus. "It's Antaeus," Senator William King

Children "Adopt" a Ship—and an Idea

Did you ever hear of school children "adopting" a ship? Well, it's being done. More than 70 American scouting vessels have been "adopted" by grade school classes in geography.

It's an arrangement promoted by the American Merchant Marine Women's Association. The thought is to increase interest in the merchant marine and at the same time give the study of geography a reality it could not otherwise have.

Take the fourth grade at McCullough School of Jackson, Mich., for example. Their teacher, Miss Jessie Huber, made the arrangements through the women's association. They "adopted" the merchant ship Exmoor, making special arrangements with the American Export Lines to do so.

The ship's officers wrote letters to the class from foreign ports where the Exmoor called.

The foreign stamps were interesting. The story of what American products were delivered at what ports changed from a dull listing to a fascinating adventure, because it was "their" ship.

Ports in Spain and Africa became more than mere dots on a colored map, because the children followed "their" ship. They learned a great deal about geography in simple, concrete terms. They learned eagerly certain matters of history connected with those places. They tried with equal eagerness to improve their own letter-writing ability, so that letters they might write to officers or crew of the Exmoor would be welcomed.

Obviously there are limits beyond which this particular idea cannot be carried. Ships' officers have lots of things to do beside to write letters home to grade school children. And there are only so many ships, anyway.

But within the limits, what better idea could there be to vitalize geography, stimulate imagination, implant some basic idea of the meaning of trade, and in general widen the horizons of children at an age when the world is just beginning to come into their view?

Exchange of letters with students in foreign countries, new plans like this one linking them to the realities of ships and trade, all bid fair to develop broader, more understanding citizens of the future than those of the past. And heaven knows the world needs them!

from three to six cases. In California, there was a rise from 16 to 18 cases. These figures, however, do not indicate any widespread prevalence of the disease, because even in South Carolina where the rate was highest there were only 55 cases for every 100,000 people. Wyoming and Arizona had only one case.

As everyone should now know, infantile paralysis is distinctly a hot weather disease, and it is not safe to predict that there will not be an outbreak later in the summer, because in many instances the condition appears first in epidemic form as late as the end of August or the first part of September.

Old Houses

I think that I shall always love old houses best. A house whose roof has felt the sting of rain, whose sturdy doors, deep set and wide, have felt wild warring winds that battered all in vain.

Old houses know so much that they must keep. Because of those who one time loved them so. Under their drooping eaves he buried deep. All the dear dreams of long and long ago.

Then when this house of mine adds to its dreams. And others come to find a lodging here. I ask that it be kind and hold them still. All of my dreams, so foolish and so dear.—Selected.

Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Smyth, Mrs. Marian Buchanan and son, Mark, returned from a delightful motor trip through North Arkansas points, and attending the Bob Burns premier in Van Buren.

The marriage of Miss Dorothy Dollarhide and Virgil Pate was beautifully solemnized, though simple in plan, on Wednesday evening at 7:30 at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Robert Campbell and Mr. Campbell on South Main street. The impressive double ring ceremony was said by Rev. Kenneth L. Spore, pastor of the First Methodist church.

The ceremony was said in the reception room before an improvised altar with a background of smilax, eucalyptus and tall palms. Three tall candelabra were entwined with smilax and eucalyptus and held white lighted tapers, which served as a background for floor baskets of pink gladioli and fern fronds; the kneeling cushion was of white satin.

Preceding the ceremony a program of nuptial music was given with Mrs. Robert Campbell at the piano accompanying Miss Frances Snyder who sang "Because" and Miss Regina Basye playing Liebestraum on the violin. During the ceremony Mrs. Campbell and Miss Basye played Gounod's "Ave Maria."

Woodrow Pate of Magnolia served his brother as best man, and the attendants were Miss Frances Ann Dollarhide, sister of the bride and Miss Fatsy Ann Campbell.

Miss Dollarhide wore becomingly gowned in a white floor length marquisette over pink. Miss Campbell's frock was of blue marquisette, their flowers were blue and pink asters. Miss Jeannette Pate, sister of the bride-groom lighted the candles. The bride was lovely in her wedding gown of ivory satin, designed on princess lines, with long draped sleeves, the skirt ending in ling train. Her finger tip veil was of silk illusion fitted off the face in coronet style. Her only ornament was a sweetheart bracelet, the gift of her mother, she carried a bouquet of brides roses and valley lilies.

Following the ceremony, an informal reception was held, assisting were Mrs. Frank Nolen, who presided over the beautiful three tiered emossed wedding cake, which was topped with a miniature bride and groom standing under wedding arch, dainty pink roses and ferns surrounded the cake, and beautified each corner of the lace covered dining table. Assisting in the dining room were Mrs. Terrell Cornelius, Mrs. Lody Spencer, Mrs. Max Cox, Mrs. Ernest McWilliams and Miss Mary Ellen Pate of Texarkana.

Immediately after the reception the couple left for a honeymoon trip to Monterey, Mex. and interesting points in Southern Texas.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Dollarhide of Foreman, she is a summa cum laude graduate of Ouachita college and on account of her outstanding grades her name appears in the Who's Who of America. The bridegroom is the second son of Mr. and Mrs. V. A. Pate, former citizens of Hope, now of Texarkana; he received his education from the public schools of Texarkana, University of Texas and is now a medical student in Little Rock.

Out of town relatives and friends attending the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. T. N. Babb of Little Rock, Mrs. Walter Brumming and Mrs. Wilford Lee of Pine Bluff, Mr. and Mrs. Ben R. Williams and Mrs. Walter Sykes Jr. of Ashdown, Mr. and Mrs. Woodrow Pate of Magnolia, Mr. and Mrs. V. A. Pate and family of Texarkana, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gault and son Fred Jr. of Foreman, Mrs. T. K. ## SERIAL STORY

Murder on the Boardwalk

BY ELINORE COWAN STONE

COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

Yesterday's Christine does a portrait of Christine, an old friend of the author, who has been a model to her, and a friend to her. Christine is the Oriental's "Temple of Truth."

CHAPTER IV

FROM within the "Temple of Truth" came the tinkle of bells and the wailing of pipes.

"Well, at least this is free," Christine said aloud, "and after all, he gave me my start on the Boardwalk."

She slipped inside. On a stage designed to suggest all the mystery of the Orient, two slim girls, dressed as temple dancers, were gyrating and prostrating themselves as if before an unseen presence.

A deep gong sounded, and they hurried from sight. From behind a screen of gillflower that simulated delicately carved white marble, a shining figure in silver robes appeared as if by magic. He moved majestically forward and stood for a moment, his arms crossed on his chest, his dark face lifted as if waiting—listening. Then he intoned in a deep, vibrant voice, "Thy servant is ready, O Krishnat! Speak through these unworthy lips."

For a while Christine's performance was much like others Christine had attended. He described small objects, gave the numbers of license cards, the insignia of lodge emblems, and the dates on letters which an assistant in a white turban took from people sitting here and there and held, apparently without glancing at them, pressed against his own forehead.

"A lady wishes to know about a ring. . . . Yes, I see it clearly—on an emerald set in diamonds. . . . She thinks a maid stole it."

Suddenly the strange twinkling eyes in the dark face fixed themselves upon a stout woman near Christine.

"No, Madame, she did not take it. You should have looked more carefully," Christine went on sternly, "before you accused a helpless servant of such a crime. Why, Madame, did it not occur to you that the ring might have slipped through that rip in the lining of your purse?"

The woman gasped. "Why not look now?" Christine suggested. "Then, as the woman hesitated, he almost thundered, 'Look now, Madame, and be thankful that it is not too late to repair the mischief you have done!'"

Then woman fumbled in her purse, cried out—a bit too sharply, Christine thought—and held aloft something that glittered with green fire.

"Oh, I am so sorry about that girl," she stammered. "I don't know how to thank you, Swami. Do not thank me, Madame," Christine told her. "It is the great Krishna you must thank."

"The great god—my fool!" Christine thought derisively. "And that stogie's acting was terrible."

Then abruptly, in the midst of a sentence, Christine broke off, pressed his fingers to his eyes, and said—a startled note in his deep, somnolent voice, "But this must wait. . . . There comes to me—something urgent!"

One could almost feel the silence in the room.

"There is here at this moment," Christine was going on, "a young woman who badly needs advice. . . . I will not name her. I will not even describe her or tell where she is sitting. I am particularly anxious neither to embarrass nor annoy her—because the word has come to me that I must help her if I can."

Behind Christine a voice said, "I never saw him do anything like this before. It gives me the creeps."

It gave Christine the creeps. Whether it was deliberate trickery with the illumination or not, all the light in the room seemed to gather itself about the glittering figure on the platform.

"Within the last 24 hours," Christine went on, "this young lady has encountered a series of surprising experiences. She has met with a grave disappointment; she has, by a strange coincidence, unexpectedly found work where she most needed it."

No one in the room seemed to breathe—least of all Christine.

"During the last 24 hours," Christine was going on, "this young lady has also received a mysterious telephone communication concerning something very near to her own safety, which I fear she has already decided to disregard."

"But," Christine thought with a sickening clutch of premonition, "why—he can't mean me!" She did not know whether she moved, or even spoke the words aloud. In any event, there was a sudden craning of necks.

"I must ask for quiet!" Christine's voice crackled. "You will, if you please, keep your eyes on me."

His own strange, tawny eyes were not on Christine, but widened on space, as if following some remote vision; yet she felt that they did not miss a flicker of her eyelids; and that deep, hypnotic voice was compelling her to listen.

"I would beg of that young lady," he was going on, his tone suddenly gentle and pleading, "that she think over the events of the past 24 hours. . . . I would beg, for instance, that she try to remember whether, when she returned to her room this afternoon, there was anything about its appearance that excited her suspicion. . . . And now, if she will come to me privately, I shall be glad to advise her, at no cost to herself—because the word comes to me that this is a thing I must do."

His eyes swept the spellbound audience commandingly.

"That is all, my friends," he said. "Go in peace!"

He raised his arms in what was almost a gesture of blessing; and the audience filed obediently out. As they went, Christine saw faces turned toward her—some touched with superstitious awe, some curious—some amused.

Christine, restored to sanity by those glances, blazed with anger. She had once read a book called "An Expose of the Medium Racket." It was all entirely clear to her now. Of course that girl at the Beachmont telephone exchange was a paid spy.

When Christine had recalled last night's conversation in the clear light of morning, it had entirely lost the frightening strangeness her own confusion and fatigue had lent it the night before. Of course everyone in Beachmont knew who Mrs. Emma Talbot was. Probably Cousin Emma had telephoned instructions to someone to see that her guest went to the Crestview, and the operator had overheard; and in her hurried attempt to pass on the information, had not had time to choose her words.

But now it was not possible to put so innocent a construction upon the girl's strange behavior. Of course she was his man's spy. . . . How easy to listen in, and find out that one of the wealthiest women on the beach was expecting a cousin to visit her, and the name of that cousin. . . . How easy, when the cousin called at the house and found her hostess absent, to suggest a hotel. . . . And how easy afterwards for this charlatan to have had her every movement watched!

"Well, anyhow," Christine thought, "he's not going to make a Roman holiday of me and get away with it."

When the rest of the audience filed out, she remained stonily in her seat. The clairvoyant came to her at once.

THE PAYOFF

By HARRY GRAYSON

NEA Service Sports Editor

CHICAGO—A broken nose suffered in a maskless boys' game in the mining town of Hazleton, Pa., gave the Chicago White Sox a star catcher.

For when a foul tip bashed the proboscis of a plucky playmate, Michael Tresh, Jr., volunteered to finish out the contest. . . . moved in from second base.

Young Tresh has been doing a swell job of backstopping ever since.

"But for that busted head I no doubt would have continued playing second base and hardly would have amounted to much," beams the major leagues' only Ukrainian athlete. "I wasn't quite fast enough to play second base."

The broken nose and the generous Detroit club gave the Pale Horse Sox a star catcher.

For when Gordon Stanley Cochrane sought to strengthen the Tigers' pitching in the winter of 1937 and eyed Lloyd Vernon Kennedy, he eyed the Sox Gerald Holmes Walker and Marvin James Owen and threw in Mike Tresh in exchange for Kennedy, Dixie Walker and Tony Piet.

At the time, Tresh, only 25 now, was an obscure minor leaguer with the Portland Coastiers. Chicago shipped Tresh to Buffalo last season and, after giving large Kenneth Sylvestri a thorough trial last spring, James Joseph Dykes installed our hero as his first-string catcher.

Tresh is Among Better Handlers of Pitchers. Tresh broke in with a bang in the Comiskey club's first series at home with the Yankees and has caught practically every game since, including double-headers.

Schooled by Muddy Ruel, long an American League star, Tresh is today one of the smartest handlers of pitchers in the business.

"Mike has baseball sense," says the huge southpaw, Thornton Lee. "For example, one day I'll be very fast and my curve won't be so good. Tresh will sense that after an inning or two and use the fast ball to advantage. On one day, Ted Lyons' knuckler will click. On another day it won't. Tresh will get the most out of what the pitcher has at the moment. He's a fine receiver. Pitchers like to throw to him."

"The most important thing in catching," asserts Tresh, "is to remember hitters. . . . not to forget weaknesses. . . . The mechanics of catching are the same in the minors and majors."

"The biggest difference is that in the majors a catcher can have a pitcher gamble on a certain pitch. The minor league pitcher's control might not be good enough for the catcher to do that."

Suffered From Heart Trouble as Youngster

Tresh is a personable and rather good-looking chap, standing at even six feet and weighing 162 pounds. He has brown hair and blue eyes.

He has a strong throwing arm and is a good enough right-hand biter of fair speed.

He suffered from heart trouble following an attack of diphtheria as a child, forcing his parents to remove him from the climate of Detroit and take him back to the higher altitude of Hazleton, where parents of his childhood with his grandparents while his parents remained in Detroit.

Tresh returned to Detroit at the age of 12 and the Tigers plucked him out of high school and American Legion ball in 1931 when he was 17. He spent his apprenticeship with Moline, Shreveport, Beaumont, Springfield, Ill., Toledo and, as previously related, with Portland and Buffalo.

Jimmy Dykes and the White Sox are thankful that the boyhood teammate got his nose in front of the foul tip that Tresh outgrew his heart ailment and that the Tigers tossed the young catcher into the deal for Kennedy.

Catching was the White Sox's most perplexing problem. Mike Tresh solved it in a jiffy.

Ice Cream

Too many a child and grownup there is no more beautiful music these hot days than the tinkle of the ice cream peddler's bell—the tinkle of a cone as the soda boy pushes into it a generous dipperful of frozen dessert. For in a dish or a cone—a stick or in other novel form—this food that literally melts in your mouth has come to be a national favorite.

According to one version, ice cream made its debut society in the United States when First Lady of the Land Dolly Madison served it at a White House reception shortly before the War of 1812. In those days, of course, this new food delicacy was definitely in the luxury class.

Today, with modern refrigerators and family-sized freezers, it's not at all difficult to make good homemade ice cream.

Ice cream, partly because it is so easy to serve, is becoming increasingly popular with menu planners. And one idea that is finding favor these days is the "Make-your-own-dundee" way of serving it. The hostess arranges several sauces on a table in trays. Strawberry, peach or chocolate, or caramel might be one assortment, along with some chopped nuts and maraschino cherries. Then each guest is given a dish of plain ice cream and allowed to concoct his own dessert.

Along about the time that heat vs. humidity becomes the great American topic of conversation, demands for lemons and limes, the two most popular of the "ade" fruits, is at its height. Lemons are available the year around—for drinks as well as numerous other uses. The season for limes in this country usually opens early in April, ends along in December.

This summer, supplies of limes and lemons should be plentiful. The lemon crop, which started coming to market last November, is the largest since the 1934-35 crop and very nearly the largest on record. The lime crop will also top those of previous years.

Ordinarily tips for limes are few. Ordinarily good limes are heavy for their size. That indicates good juice content. Decay may appear as a mold or a soft discolored plate on the stem end. Brown discolorations of the skin may or may not affect the fruit inside.

Lemons that have a fine textured skin and are heavy for their size are generally of better quality than the coarse-skinned, light weight fruit. Decay, as in limes, appears as a mold or as a soft discoloration at the stem end. Lemons to avoid are those that are soft or spongy to the touch.

Even before vitamins were singled out by food scientists it was known that lemons and limes had a certain something needed in the diet. Sailors took long supplies of lemons and limes on voyages, to prevent the dread disease of scurvy. To day this has been identified as vitamin C or ascorbic acid. As a source of it lemon juice ranks along with grapefruit juice in the excellent class. Lime juice is usually considered lower in vitamin C value.

Still another refugee brought with him from Germany a patented process used in the manufacture of gloves; the business he established here is doing an annual gross of $100,000.

Proposed Sky Speedway to New Zealand

Big four-engine Boeing Clippers, like that pictured above, will link America and New Zealand over this route if Civil Aeronautics Authority approves application of Pan-American Airways. Course from San Francisco to Auckland, New Zealand, would be 7552 miles long; four-day schedules would clip 11 days from fastest existing transport time between U. S. and its fourth largest world market area. Plans call for full day's layover in Honolulu, overnight stops at Canton Island and New Caledonia. Planes would go through Los Angeles on outward trip, but not on return trip. Proposed British Imperial Airways extension from Australia to New Zealand, shown by dotted line, would provide direct connection with American service across South Pacific.

Look Out, the British Are Coming!

more time to secure affidavits, etc. If the Christians of the United States increase their assistance to their co-religionists, the proportion of Christian refugees will increase.

In addition to other misapprehensions, Pickett has found that the public does not know how really few people are coming in under the quota laws.

"It is illuminating to see that, compared with other years, before Hitler, the numbers who came in 1938, the largest since Hitler, were very small."

For the six months of July 1, 1938, to December 31, 1938, there was a net immigration into this country for permanent residence of 31,618. Based upon a population of 130 million, the 1938 net immigration to the country represented less than 1 per cent of our population.

China Counts on American Trucker to Give Nation Highway to Victory

By NEA Service
CHICAGO—The American truckman who built one old two-cylinder, hard-tire truck into a fleet of 2500 streamlined highway cruisers, is going to China to systematize the road transport system on which hangs China's only chance of winning the Japanese war.

It is John Lewis Keeshin, president of the Keeshin Trans-continental Motor Freight Lines, the development of which turned trucking into big business. Already his assistant, Maurice Sheehan, vice president and treasurer of Keeshin Freight Lines, Inc., a subsidiary, is on his way to China to begin the huge task. Keeshin himself will follow later.

The job of creating a smooth-working motor transport system for China while, at the same time, making it was for the United States, is somewhat similar. And Keeshin's experience in creating the first American transcontinental system should be of the utmost service in solving the Chinese transport problem.

Product of Rough and Tumble Era
Keeshin knows what it is to build. His first delivery job was driving a horse and wagon for his father's Chicago meat markets. Keeshin was soon drawn to trucking, and he landed a job with a local trucking company. He had 25 trucks; by 1925, he had 50; by 1930, 100.

After that, he was one of the potent figures in the early stages of rising business. By 1935, Keeshin was operating in a half-dozen states with 200 tractors, 300 trailers.

Notoriously unafraid of the racketeers and hi-jackers who have at times mistreated the motor-carrier field, Keeshin has faced personal danger and hardships, regulatory red-tape, financial handicaps, and organizational difficulties, without flinching. It was this record which drew the Chinese government to seek his services in solving a problem on whose answer depends the future of China as an independent country.

He's Got a Tough Job
Keeshin's problem in China is tremendous. Japan holds all the seaports of China, most of the important rail-

Yankees Finally Beat Leonard, 4-0

Knuckle Ball Artist, However, Gives Champions Only Six Hits

NEW YORK (AP)—The Yankees, who had been beaten four straight times by Dutch Leonard's knuckleballing, finally found him Wednesday for a 4-to-0 victory over the Washington Senators.

Marlin Russ, rookie southpaw, held the Senators to four hits in getting the shutout, his second victory of the season, while Leonard's knuckleballing was offset by home runs by DiMaggio and Red Rolfe.

DiMaggio drove in New York's first run with a double behind Charley Keller, two-hitter in the first inning. After that, Leonard held the champions hitless and scoreless until the seventh when DiMaggio hit his 17th homer, again beating Keller, who had walked. Rolfe added his homer for grand measure in the eighth.

Russ was in trouble in only one inning, the fourth, when singles put Jim Bloodworth and Jim Vernon on base and the rookie hurler threw wild trying to catch Vernon off first. Bloodworth tried to score on the play and was thrown out at the plate.

Vander Meer's Pitching Arm to Get Treatment

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP)—Lee Jensen, one-time baseball trainer, said Wednesday the Cincinnati baseball club had arranged for Johnny Vander Meer to come here for muscular treatment of his pitching arm.

Jensen, who treated Vander Meer prior to his coming into the major leagues, said Warren Giles of the Cincinnati club made arrangements for Vander Meer to take the treatments within the next five days.

The Cincinnati pitcher, winner of two consecutive no-hit, no-run games last season, has turned in but five victories this year against eight defeats.

A Chaplain's Observance of Carnival Life Related by the Rev. R. C. Jones

Declares Management of Park Amusement Company Insists on Clean, Moral Entertainment in Operation of His Show

By REV. RALPH CURTIS JONES

The employees of the Park Amusement company, with headquarters at Lake Charles, La., under the management of Cliff Liles, insists that the amusement offered by this organization be conducted in a high-class, clean, moral, legitimate way, free of any trickery or takes, etc.

A carnival is not a Sabbath school or religious institution, and individuals, comprising the carnival, like other individuals of varied religious beliefs, and few admit that they have no religious beliefs, and take a notoriety conception of things in general.

Let, regardless, of their philosophy of life this writer has met none who claim to be an Atheist. While the Park Amusement company makes no pretense of being a religious organization, it is religious indirectly, it not directly.

Mr. Liles is a very devout Roman Catholic and Mrs. Liles, an equally devout Lutheran, and with their profound religious conviction and seeing the good in each other's religious convictions and the good in all religious creed, they, naturally, make an ideal couple.

They are moral, temperate, as well as spiritually. This writer, a Protestant minister, who is the chaplain, tries in a general way to provide for the religious needs of all who desire his spiritual counsel and guidance.

A number of carnivals and circuses have as their chaplain a minister or priest, serving a spiritual adviser to all who wish their counsel and guidance. This is my second time to serve as chaplain for show people, and I have found the most of their roughness is only on the surface, for under their skin most of them have a heart of gold.

For I have seen them provide for wayfaring large families until they were able to help themselves.

Help For Needy

At Nogales, Arizona, a carnival pugilist, who served with me in the Canadian Army and known as the Canadian Wild Cat and whose chaplain, later became, with the same carnival, raised money and other help for a stranded protestant minister, who had crossed the Mexican and American border at Sonora at Nogales, Arizona, en route to other parts of the U. S. A. A few days later did the same thing for an exile priest.

At Lordsburg, New Mexico, I thought a husband and wife with five children who were automobile-stranded. This prize fighter and wrestler with other carnival help provided food, shelter, and clothes for them, and later work, and still later gas and oil for transportation to their home in California.

Innumerable times while with the Park Amusement company, both Caucasians and negroes, have come to me for something to eat and I have sent them to Mrs. Lile, pointing her out to them with instructions not to tell her who sent them; and she has even gone to the trouble to personally cook a meal for them.

The last one was a negro man, who looked all in from box car traveling. Mr. Lile, too, will put himself out in time and cash to help one in distress. Although he is here and there, he will always pause to help his fellowman. Mr. Lile is a high type business man as well as an individual, who understands people and is not very easily fooled by worthless parasites. The requirements by Mr. Lile of his force is that they always keep themselves physically clean, and their sleeping quarters in a sanitary condition, and the verbal expressions free from the use of profane language or vulgar talk, arguments and talks, honesty in dealing with the public and carnival mates.

Must Obey Orders

No drinking of intoxicants while on duty or show grounds nor the entertainments of questionable characters. Men and women in charge of concessions must attend strictly to business and not entertain visitors other than in capacity of their duty.

Mrs. John E. Webster, also, a devout Roman Catholic and formerly with the Missouri Pacific Railroad and now press agent manager of minstrel shows, also special agent and recording secretary, sees that the wish of Mr. and Mrs. Lile is carried out in every detail, including courteous treatment to the public, who make it possible for this splendid type of amusement. Mr. Lile always looked after the proper physical needs of his force, having at one time studied medicine. He boards and lodges his entire force except a few families who prefer to board themselves. Meals are plentiful and wholesome. He urges the members of the carnival to attend some church service on Sunday and other days when possible. On the whole, life in this carnival is sort of a military and army life with its discipline, rewards, punishments, promotion and demotion. To obey orders means a happy and care-free life.
